Siobhán is a Partner at Macrae in London, where she works closely with leading global law firms to identify strategic opportunities and partner talent. She also helps law firm partners and teams reach their full potential by identifying the optimal platforms for achieving their professional goals and advising them throughout the lateral move process. Throughout her career, Siobhán has been known for her deep integrity and her ability to successfully deliver long-term hires and solutions.

Siobhán's track record includes opening offices for US and international law firms in London, Europe and Asia and advising on law firm mergers. She has been responsible for many market-leading partner and team moves to elite US and international law firms in London and Europe. She enjoys an extensive network of contacts across the legal market, both in law firms and in-house, which she leverages on behalf of clients to ensure a successful outcome.

Prior to joining Macrae, Siobhán was a Board Director and Shareholder at Fox Rodney and, earlier in her career, established the Legal Desk at Sheffield Haworth. She trained and qualified at Arthur Cox in Dublin before practising as a capital markets lawyer at Allen & Overy in London. She graduated with a law degree from University College Dublin and an LLM from the London School of Economics.

Siobhán has long been an advocate for increasing the representation of diverse individuals within the legal industry. She regularly moderates panel and roundtable discussions on diversity and social mobility and mentors students. A trusted source for journalists seeking insight on this topic as well as on broader market trends and developments, Siobhán's commentary has appeared in The Financial Times, Bloomberg, The Lawyer, Legal Business, and Financial News. She is frequently invited to participate in industry conferences and events.
